National Cycle Network
Go Traffic Free in Scotland

The Central Highlands, Argyll and The Trossachs
Use this booklet to follow safe and attractive walking and cycling options in the Central Highlands, Argyll, and The Trossachs. It shows the main traffic-free sections on the National Cycle Network, Regional Routes and key local routes. Use it to plan your (carbon-free) trips around and out of town. See how far and easily you can travel without a car.

For information on cycle routes across Scotland, see Sustrans’ Routes2Ride website – you can also add your own routes, comments and photos. www.routes2ride.org.uk/scotland

Use Ordnance Survey maps to plan your own routes. Contact the relevant local authorities for more information on cycling routes in each area.

Good Cycling Code

Obey the rules of the road

- Be courteous
  - Give way to pedestrians
  - Remember that some people are hard of hearing or visually impaired
  - Where there are wheelchair users or horse riders, please give way
  - Ring a bell in good time or politely call out to warn of your approach

Care for the environment

- Can you reach the start of your journey by bike or public transport?
- Follow the Scottish Outdoor Access Code; in particular, do not damage crops, don’t disturb livestock or wildlife and always take litter home

Look after yourself

- Take care at junctions, when cycling downhill and on loose or wet surfaces
- In remote areas carry food, water, repair kit, map and waterproofs
- Keep your bike roadworthy; use lights in poor visibility
- Consider wearing a helmet and conspicuous clothing

Using public transport

Why not use the train to carry you and your bike further afield or to take you home after a cycle? Bicycles can be carried on most trains, but it is advisable to check in advance and book a place as space is limited. For rail information call 08457 48 49 50 or visit www.thetrainline.co.uk. Bicycles can be carried on Citylink coaches, but they must be bagged or boxed. Check before travelling. Phone 08705 50 50 50 or visit www.citylink.co.uk.

For information on all public transport within Scotland, call 0871 200 22 33 or visit www.travelinescotland.com.

Scottish Outdoor Access Code

Know the Code before you go ... Enjoy Scotland’s outdoors - responsibly!

Everyone has the right to be on most land and inland water providing they act responsibly. Your access rights and responsibilities are explained fully in the Scottish Outdoor Access Code.

Whether you’re in the outdoors or managing the outdoors, the key things are to:

- take responsibility for your own actions;
- respect the interests of other people;
- care for the environment.

Find out more by visiting www.outdooraccess-scotland.com or phoning your local Scottish Natural Heritage office.

Time: The time given to complete a route is calculated on an average travelling time of 7 miles or 11 km per hour. This allows for a leisurely cycling pace or for plenty of stops. Times and distances given for linear routes are for one way only.

Whilst every effort has been made to achieve accuracy of information in this booklet at time of publication, Sustrans can take no responsibility for: loss or injury (including fatal) to persons; loss of damage to property or equipment; trespass, irresponsible riding or any other mishap that may be suffered as a result of following route descriptions in this booklet.

Leave the friendly Highland capital of Inverness to cycle by some remarkable historical sights. The route heads east, with a variety of on-road cycle lanes and quiet residential sections, before climbing away from the Moray Firth.

At the Newlands crossroads it’s worth diverting right for 200 yards to the Culloden battlefield site and newly renovated visitor centre. Scottish history was written here in April 1746 when the Jacobites were routed by government forces. Decades of Highland oppression ensued.

Back on the bike, continue to the magnificent Clava Cairns. This collection of well preserved Bronze Age cairns and passage graves stand timeless in a tranquil open setting. Those with an interest in archaeology, or who are simply curious about our ancestors, will be absorbed.

If you head north across the Kessock Bridge, you can follow Route 1 for 14 miles to Dingwall using a combination of quiet roads and new cycleway alongside the A835 between Tore and Maryburgh.

Category: Mainly on-road, some cycle path

Distance: 8 miles/13 kilometres

Time: 1 hour 15 minutes

Gradient: Sustained climb from Balloch to Newlands, otherwise fairly flat

Surface: Tarmac, some whin dust
Explore the Caledonian Canal on this peaceful cycle from Inverness. To get to the canal, follow the River Ness upstream, branching right on to Ness Bank. Where this road curves away from the river at the suspension bridge, keep straight on the riverside path.

Continue until you reach a narrow bridge and follow the Great Glen Way (GGW) signs onto the Ness Islands. Follow the GGW signs along the path across these green, wooded islands to the far river bank. Turn left and follow the track or quiet Bucht Road to Whin Park where there is a childrens’ play park, boating pond, refreshments and toilets.

Carry on up the road to Tomnahurich Bridge, where you leave the GGW. Don’t cross the bridge, but turn sharp left onto the canal towpath. From here enjoy a perfect family-friendly ride along the east side of the canal – at some points you can see the canal to one side and the River Ness to the other. The ride ends at Dochgarroch Lock where there is a picnic spot and a café nearby.

Be a considerate cyclist
- Avoid cycling where your tyres will damage the path or verges
- Give way to others on the towpath and warn them of your approach
- For more information contact British Waterways on 01923 201120 or www.waterscape.com
Try an exciting section of National Route 7 as it crosses the Drumochter Pass. It’s the ultimate route north with long sections of purpose built off-road cycle path and minor roads that carry only occasional local traffic.

The start, in the hamlet of Calvine, is marked by a drum sculpture, which is apt as your heart will be beating loudly as you climb to the 1508-foot-high pass. Along the way there are jaw dropping views down Loch Garry as it disappears mysteriously into the hills. From the top of the pass, the reward is a five-mile downhill run to Dalwhinnie.
With the heady smells from the Dalwhinnie Distillery wafting in your nostrils, this route, through heathery Glen Truim in the Cairngorms National Park, will leave you intoxicated.

After an initial climb from Dalwhinnie, Glen Truim offers perfect cycling on a quiet, gently undulating road. The elevated position gives good views of the glacially smoothed Grampian Mountains.

After the Falls of Truim, the route follows the old A9 to reach Newtonmore. The continuation to nearby Kingussie is on an excellent family friendly off-road cycle path. Both of these villages have a long and proud history, which is recounted in their respective Highland Folk Museums.
This is a wonderful off-road route where you can forget all about traffic and soak up the mountain scenery. It follows an off-road variant of National Route 7 and passes through heather moorland, pine forest, and lichen-rich birch woods.

Access the route from the southern end of Aviemore, the train station, or off the main street, and turn left along a minor road. After going through a housing estate the route leaves the town behind: views of the Cairngorm’s deep northern corries open up on the right. Continue to join a very quiet road for the final mile which leads easily through Scots pine to the attractive village of Boat of Garten, the Osprey village.
From Boat of Garten the route follows a dedicated paved and flat cyclepath, which runs separate from and parallel to the road; open heather-covered moorland extends to the right. After 1¼ miles, cross the A95 to follow the off-road variant of National Route 7 to Carrbridge.

In Carrbridge take the off-road route for Slochd, passing Carrbridge’s wonderfully antiquated humpbacked bridge. The initial section follows a quiet minor road before branching off through beautiful birch woods to descend to the restored, grass-covered Sluggan Bridge. From here enjoy cycling through Scots pine to arrive by Slochd Mhór Lodge (bunkhouse) and cycle shop. Another 1.5 miles takes you to Slochd Summit, where the cycle track runs between the railway and the A9 through a narrow pass.
The Great Glen Way runs for 73 miles/117 km between Fort William and Inverness. Cyclists: please show consideration to walkers on the route – make them aware of your approach and slow down when passing. For more information on the route, contact the Great Glen Way rangers on 01320 366 633; email greatglenway@highland.gov.uk or see www.greatglenway.com

Great Glen Cycle

This is an attractive and mostly flat 32-mile traffic-free route from Fort William to Fort Augustus. Maps 7 and 8 show both ends of the route in more detail.

The middle section runs from Gairlochy to Bridge of Oich (19 miles/31 km). From the end of the canal at Gairlochy follow the Great Glen Ways (GGW) signs along the quiet B8005 to Clunes and then a forest road and minor public road to Laggan.

At Laggan you have a choice of routes. You can continue on the minor public road north of the canal and then on a steep forest road to Invergarry. Continue on the GGW through the forest to Bridge of Oich (7½ miles). Alternatively, cross the canal at Laggan Locks (good picnic spot). Take care crossing the main road, turn right and immediately left onto a steep path up through trees to the disused railway line. As the route reaches Loch Oich, it descends to the old military road and then swings left at the northern end of the loch towards Bridge of Oich. The path is rough and muddy in places and you may have to lift your bike over gates in a couple of places (6¼ miles).

Note

This route is part of the proposed National Route 78 between Fort William and Inverness.
Explore the western end of the Great Glen along the banks of the Caledonian Canal. This is a great family-friendly cycle with marvellous views of the north face of Ben Nevis. The route starts from the centre of Fort William - from the train station take an off-road path behind the supermarket. Quiet streets lead to a footbridge over the river near Inverlochy Castle. Follow cycle lanes along the B8006 and turn left onto a shore path and follow it round to Neptune’s Staircase (take care crossing the A830). This route affords memorable views right down Loch Linnhe.

Neptune’s Staircase – a photogenic flight of eight locks, which raises vessels to 70 feet above sea level – is equally memorable. Continue on the eastern towpath to cycle easily along to Gairlochy where this section of the canal ends and Loch Lochy begins.

Note
This route is part of the proposed National Route 78 between Fort William and Inverness.
Those with an aversion to hills will love this flat route which follows the Caledonian Canal from the head of Loch Oich. Join the towpath by the Aberchalder Swing Bridge to enjoy effortless traffic-free cycling.

The River Oich runs alongside for much of the towpath’s length, giving a watery feeling to this outing. On the right, rise the steep slopes of the Great Glen formed by a tear fault in the Earth’s crust. Continue to enter bustling Fort Augustus where the canal descends through five locks to enter Loch Ness. Among the many attractions is the Caledonian Canal Visitor Centre, which details the waterway’s history up to its present day rejuvenation.

Note
This route is part of the proposed National Route 78 between Fort William and Inverness.
The shipping shortcut of the west coast, the Crinan Canal, is a delight for cyclists of all ages. Dark peaty waters fill this wide canal which links the Atlantic with Loch Fyne. Join the towpath by Lochgilphead and turn right to cycle through lush countryside.

At Cairnbaan, there’s the first in a series of locks. To the north of the village lies Kilmartin Glen which contains hundreds of Cup and Ring marked stones, chambered cairns and stone circles dating from Neolithic/Bronze Age times. Continue on the canal by Móine Mhór (The Great Bog) to reach the attractive harbour at Crinan.

For a more adventurous ride, head south on the canal towpath to Ardrishaig. Before the canal intersects the main road cross a bridge to the right and head up through the residential streets and lanes until you come to the start of a track that leads along the hillside above Loch Gilp. Best suited to mountain bikes, there are some steep gradients, but spectacular views.

Time: The time given to complete a route is calculated on an average travelling time of 7 miles or 11 km per hour. This allows for a leisurely cycling pace or for plenty of stops. Times and distances given for linear routes are for one way only.
This mixed route has a very flat start and finish, but a very hilly middle! The latter, with its steep off-road climb through Achray Forest, is testing, even for the fittest. In complete contrast, the other sections are ideal for all the family; the finish by Loch Venachar offers some of the best cycling in Scotland.

Start from Cobleland to follow an old railway line by the infant River Forth. Cycle through Aberfoyle before the climb through the forest – rewarded with great views from the top. Descend by Loch Drunkie and look out for Route 7 signs directing you right at a junction. The path leads by Loch Venachar, which has many picnic spots.

Carry straight on at the junction to reach Loch Katrine. There’s a great cycle and walkway round the loch to Stonachlachar where you and your bike can catch the Steamship Sir Walter Scott back to the eastern end of the loch or carry on to Inversnaid on the east shore of Loch Lomond. (Use OS Explorer maps 365 and 364).

Category: Railway path, forestry route, loch shore cycle path and minor road
Distance: 15 miles/24 kilometres
Time: 3 hours
Gradient: Flat to Aberfoyle followed by a long sharp climb and descent to Loch Venachar. Flat thereafter
Surface: Tarmac, forestry roads. Mountain bike recommended
This almost entirely off-road route is a big favourite with families and others looking for a quiet cycle. From Callander a level cyclepath follows the old Oban railway line alongside the River Leny. Just outside the town it passes the remains of a Roman fort at Bochastle – one of several in the area.

Pass the mesmerising Falls of Leny and continue, through an oakwood, to reach Loch Lubnaig, which has a strong Highland character. The cycle route uses a quiet access road for some of the way. Take a picnic – you’re sure to find an idyllic spot for lunch. After four flat miles you’ll encounter some hills and one very steep zig-zag section but the final stretch into Strathyre is a breeze.
Enjoy another entirely off-road section of National Route 7 as you travel north to the beautiful village of Killin. Join the route off the minor road to Balquhidder, which is worth a look itself as it’s the resting place of Rob Roy. The incorrigible outlaw – forced by a crooked landlord into a life of cattle rustling – is synonymous with the surrounding rugged landscape.

As you approach Lochearnhead, you’ll experience this ruggedness first hand where the cyclepath climbs alarmingly before a long incline up Glen Ogle. Enjoy the views and catch your breath at the top before continuing through forestry for a well deserved rest in Killin.
From gentle rides along old railway lines, canal towpaths and quiet country routes over moorland, mountain and forest terrain, cycling in Scotland has something for everyone.

This map shows the National Cycle Network routes in Scotland. You may want to cycle part of them as a day trip or enjoy a longer cycle.
